COMPARISON TABLE:

CRITERIA	GEMINI AI	CHATGPT AI
Structure	It follows a traditional, linear layout. It includes a "Profile Summary" and a dedicated "Interests" section at the bottom. However, the dates in the professional experience section are overlapping (e.g., 2011–2020 vs. 2019–2021), which creates a confusing timeline.	Uses a modern, clean structure. It categorizes roles more effectively, separating specific volunteer and scholarship roles from professional work. The timeline is much more logical (2022 through 2026), making it easier for a recruiter to follow your career path.
Clarity	There's Significant issues here. The text contains heavy "hallucinations" or "AI gibberish" (e.g., "Pre::prenly oosasuted to enauth"). It's visually a resume, but the actual content is unreadable and wouldn't pass a human or ATS (Applicant Tracking System) check.	High clarity. The bullet points are written in clear English with "Action-Result" phrasing (e.g., "Increased sales... by 10%"). The contact information and headings are easy to find and read instantly.
Formatting	It has a classic, "printed paper" feel with a nice background aesthetic (pen and plant). While it looks like a real photo, the text alignment inside the document is a bit crowded, and the horizontal lines are very heavy.	It is Professional and "digital-ready." It uses a nice pop of color (blue) for the header, which makes it stand out without being unprofessional. The use of white space is much better, which prevents the reader from feeling overwhelmed.
Overall Quality	This version is better suited as a visual concept or a template layout. Because the text is scrambled, it cannot be used as a functional resume without a total rewrite.	This is a functional draft. It provides actual copy that you can edit and use. It successfully highlights your specific achievements (95% milestone success rate, 20% engagement boost) which is exactly what hiring managers look for.

REFLECTION:

1. Which LLM performed better and why?

For me, ChatGPT-generated resume performed significantly better.While Gemini created a more "artistic" lifestyle photo, it failed at the primary task: generating readable, coherent text. ChatGPT produced a functional, high-quality document with logical dates, measurable achievements (KPIs), and professional language that could actually be used in a job application.

2. What differences did you observe?

First, text integrity. Gemini's text is largely "hallucinated" or has meaningless characters that look like words from a distance, whereas ChatGPT's text is grammatically correct and contextually relevant. Next, logical consistency. Gemini listed overlapping dates (2011–2020 and 2019–2021) which makes the career path look confusing. ChatGPT organized the roles chronologically and separated Professional Experience, from Leadership, and "Scholarships. Lastly, visual presentation. Gemini focused on a "skeuomorphic" look making it look like a physical piece of paper on a desk. ChatGPT focused on a clean, digital UI/UX design that emphasizes readability.

3. What improvements did you make in your final resume?

I will add and highlight more quantifiable results. Added specific metrics like 95% milestone success rate and 10% increase in reach. As well as, role categorization like instead of listing everything under Experience, the final version distinguishes between professional work, volunteerism, and academic honors. Lastly, information hierarchy will use color and bolding to ensure the name and contact info are the first things a recruiter sees.

4. What did you learn about prompting?

Through this exercise, I learned that the effectiveness of an AI's output is heavily dependent on the depth of the context provided; by including specific details like my university and specific job roles, I was able to move beyond generic templates toward a much more tailored and relevant result. I also observed a clear variance in how different models interpret a prompt, as some prioritize the graphic design and visual aesthetic of the image, while others focus more on the data-structuring and textual accuracy of the content. Most importantly, I realized that prompting is an inherently iterative process, achieving a high-quality final product often requires combining the strengths of different AI outputs and fine-tuning the language with specific action verbs to ensure the final document is both professional and precise.
